

Investigative Tools for the Commons

OpenAleph and the case for a Shared Data Library

Karina Shedrofsky & Jan Strozyk &
Simon Wörpel & Alex Ștefănescu

Data and Research Center, 25.05.2025

Who are we?

Karina Shedrofsky

- Director of Research

Jan Strozyk

- Data and Journalism Projects Director

Simon Wörpel

- Director of Technology

Alex Ștefănescu

- Senior Developer

What do we do?

- Independent organisation
- Providing data and research services
- Building open-source investigative tools

We believe in the commons.

Creating and maintaining an open library of data and scrapers.

How do we do it?

- OpenAleph (open-source investigative tool)
- The Follow the Money schema
- The DARC Library (datasets from official sources)

What's next?

- Build software that addresses real needs.
- Build and maintain scrapers.
- Curate data and make it easy to import and work with.
- Facilitate collaborations on the The Investigative Commons.

Join the conversation

darc.social

- Join the conversation
- Suggest new features
- How are you using OpenAleph in your workflow?

Stay up to date

openaleph.org/blog

- New features
- Technical behind-the-scenes

darc.li/news

- Newsletter

Time for the roundtable.

<https://darc.li/dh25-roundtable>

